Some Societies May Lose License at Hands of Insurance Burenu.

Fraternal beneficiary associations are not gotting licenses to do business in Virginia this year with any appreciable degree of ease. They will be held to sirict compliance with the law, and must show a genuine lodge system and a representative form of government before they are permitted to continue as fraternal associations, with low rates of license taxation.

It is quite within the bounds of possibility that half a dozen such societies will be barred from the State as the result of the stand taken by the Bureau of Insurance. A Virginia association may be caught.

Proof is required that delegates to grand lodge meetings are properly elected, and that they represent the members in equitable fashion. W. K. Amsden, an assistant to H. A. Hammond-Smith, the New York artist, who has the contract for restoring the pictures in the State Library portrait gallery, has arrived and is making preparations for the work, He is a arranging tables, and is unpacking the brushes and tools to be used.

Mr. Smith is expected in Richmond within a few days, and will probably be engaged for several weeks in the task. His aim and that of the State Library Board is to bring the portraits into as close likeness with their original appearance as possible, and to this end very little pain will be applied, and then only where it has cracked and fallen off. The task is not to retouch, but to restore.
